Do you need a kid-capable canine?

Our shelter has dogs who would make great kid companions, dogs who love visiting with kids but don’t want to live with them full-time, and dogs who are uncomfortable or even afraid of children. Tell us more about your lifestyle and plans so we can consider the dog’s kid-capability when picking out your possible pooches.

- I am currently expecting a child
- Kids live in my home
- Kids frequently visit my home
- My dog will be around lots of kids in my neighborhood
- I don’t have kids, but might want to try during my dog’s lifetime
- No kids for me!

How do you feel about adopting a dog with a training requirement?

Some dogs require positive, reward-based classes depending on their age, breed, or behavior.

- I would consider adopting a dog with a training requirement
- I would prefer to only meet dogs without a training requirement
- I might consider adopting a dog with a training requirement; I want to meet the dogs and learn more before deciding

Where will you keep the dog during the day and where will the dog sleep at night? (i.e. indoors, at work, in the yard, in the garage, at doggie-daycare etc.)

In an average day, how many hours will the dog be without human companionship?

- Never – I work from home, the dog can come to work, the dog will go to doggie-daycare, etc.
- Less than 2 hours per day
- 2-4 hours per day
- 4-6 hours per day
- 6-8 hours per day
- 8+ hours per day

When good dogs go bad...

*No dog is perfect, and even the best dogs have quirks! We do a behavior evaluation of every dog before making them available for adoption, so we have a pretty good idea of what our pups' strengths and weaknesses are. Let us know what traits you would be willing to work with:
